YUBA City – In an area that spearheads farm-to-fork, the Yuba City Unified School District is joining the effort to bring farms to schools.

Yuba City Unified is working toward creating a district farm to sustain all the schools in the area. They've already started implementing some school gardens and are seeing success.

"It was really neat how the atmosphere changed as our salad bar slowly converted from being store-bought food to food that was gardened that they planted and grew because, as they noticed it, they were taking more and more salad," said Jacob Natalia, manager of the Barry Elementary School cafeteria.
